Nora wanted a job at the family gathering. Her cousin carried plates, and her uncle filled the water pitcher. Nora looked at the crowded table and felt unsure. Then she noticed that the place cards were still in a pile. She asked if she could arrange them. Her aunt showed her where each person would sit. Nora read the names carefully and put one card beside every plate. When she found two people with the same first name, she added a small drawing to help tell their cards apart. Soon the guests found their seats. Nora smiled. Her job had been small, but it had helped everyone feel expected and welcome at the table.

1. What job did Nora choose?

2. Who showed Nora where people would sit?

3. Why did Nora add small drawings to two cards?

4. How did Nora's work help the gathering?
